

Bangladesh: A Climate Trap

In Bangladesh's capital, Dhaka, "climate change refugees" are moving from the countryside and into squalid slums due to environmental degradation. Like millions of others, Alam Mia has been forced to make the teeming capital of Dhaka his home. We follow his journey as he leaves his homestead in search of a livelihood in the city. Dhaka feels more like a foreign country than home. For the family, it is a struggle for survival. Alam Mia is trapped. His move to the city is not a beginning full of possibilities. Korial – Dhaka's largest slum signifies the bitter culmination of his dreams.